for "Boss."

White slavers, kidnapers of schoolgirls, win official protection in Atlantic City by voting their victims in batches at various polling places.

How the SWORN testimony of high Atlantic City and county officials before the Case-McAllister legislative committee is at startling variance with the findings of the Evening Journal reporters, is told in full today.

These same officials are scheduled today to testify before the Wolber committee on Atlantic City conditions.

The Wolber committee is to make an investigation of vote fraud reports.

Perhaps they might be interested in reading the following article, nineteenth in a series based upon an Evening Journal investigation of the reign of terror in Atlantic City conducted by the prohibition-corrupted officials.

"Why, I took in every tramp I could get and voted 'em.

"Were set, here, with the Big Boy himself.

"I handed them out twenty-six votes from this house alone."

The speaker was Mae Mason, buxom, colored, notorious Atlantic City white slaver.

The place was an upstairs sitting room in a dive of hers, protected by officials, at No. 288 North Illinois avenue.

The time was 2:50 a. m. Sunday, November 17 last.

Her hearers were two Evening Journal reporters, an immaculately dressed, gray-haired, can-swinging visitor of sixty and two inmates in their teens, "Agnes" and "Jane."

ANOTHER VOTE SWINGER.

The Evening Journal reporters knew of Mae Mason.

For many years she, with Kitty Harris, also a vote swinger, has been one of the outstanding individual white-slave operators in Atlantic City.

The reporters did not, however, when they saw the typical bright
